Joanne Bober is on the Washington University Arts & Sciences National Council. She is an attorney who received her A.B. from Washington University and her J.D. from Georgetown University Law Center. She has practiced law for almost 30 years, during which she headed the Mergers & Acquisition Section of Jones Day, a leading global law firm, and was the Chief Legal Officer of three public companies: JCPenney, Chubb, and General Signal. She is a frequent speaker on the subjects of women in leadership and diversity in the law. She understands the kinds of barriers women face in both the legal and corporate worlds and has developed approaches to navigating these worlds with greater success.
